Methodology: Defining Industrial Lands: Step 1 – Zoning and Future Land Use Designation

This section details the methodology behind the initial selection process for industrial lands throughout the four-county study area.

The first step in attaining a useful selection of the region’s industrial land base is to intersect lands designated for future industrial use in area Comprehensive Plans with lands currently zoned for industrial use in city and county zoning codes. Comprehensive Plan designations are useful because they represent a community consensus in jurisdictions where comprehensive planning has been undertaken.

But what designations and categories are “industrial?” In order to compare apples to apples, a translation of the myriad jurisdictions’ native designations and categories into a common language is necessary to enable a systematic selection of industrial lands across the region.

Listed below are two discrete coding systems developed to translate two GIS datasets used to select regional industrial lands: Future Land Use (FLU) designations from city and county Comprehensive Plans; and, Zoning Code categories. Native FLU and Zoning Codes were first translated to this common system.

The pages that follow present detailed crosswalk tables indicating the specific translations from each jurisdiction’s native Comprehensive Plan designations and Zoning codes to the common system developed for this study.

Future Land Use (FLU) Lookup Table (based on PSRC regional land use coding system):
